Volume 5, numéro 07, juillet 2010

Responsables : Marie J. Bouchard et Paulo R. A. Cruz Filho

La Chaire de recherche du Canada en économie sociale diffuse dans ce bulletin périodique les résultats de sa veille sur la recherche en économie sociale. Depuis sa création, la Chaire travaille au développement d'un système de veille sur la recherche en économie sociale. Les thèmes centraux de la veille sont la « gouvernance et intérêt général », les « modes de développement et de financement », les « méthodes d'évaluation » la « gestion des organisations », l'« innovation sociale », ainsi que les « politiques publiques » concernant l'économie sociale. L'équipe de veilleurs s'intéresse en priorité aux références portant spécifiquement sur l'économie sociale, mais est aussi à l'affût des publications susceptibles d'influencer la recherche en économie sociale. En plus des références d'intérêt pour les chercheurs, étudiants, centres de recherche et réseaux en économie sociale, le bulletin contient des informations d'actualité provenant du milieu de la recherche (nouveaux centres et projets de recherche, événements, appels à contribution). En diffusant ses résultats de veille, la Chaire espère contribuer à l'avancement des connaissances sur l'économie sociale. Nous vous invitons à faire circuler ce bulletin dans vos réseaux. De plus, n'hésitez pas à nous faire parvenir de l'information qui pourrait intéresser les lecteurs de ce bulletin. Merci!

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “There are three reasons for promoting mutual building societies: they are less prone than banks to pursue risky speculative activity; a mixed system produces a more stable financial sector; and a stronger mutual sector enhances competition within the financial system. The banking crisis highlighted the importance of retaining diverse models of financial service providers, and while mutuals were affected by the recession, they were not themselves responsible for causing the recession, as were private banks. The UK Government needs to secure a financial return for the failed financial institutions it nationalised and a low level of overall economic risk for the taxpayer. Given a trade-off, the long-run benefits of financial sustainability and reduced risk, plus enhanced competition, need to be given proper weighting compared with any short run gain through a trade sale and the repayment of the government’s support. This paper focuses on the case of Northern Rock as the most suitable candidate for remutualisation, and whose disposal is under current consideration, but the analysis applies more widely.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(resumen proveniente del artículo) “El presente artículo tiene por finalidad presentar una reflexión acerca de la actividad del sector cooperativo y su contribución en el desarrollo local. Para la realización del estudio se utilizó un modelo de investigación cualitativo, basado en la técnica de revisión documental. Los resultados evidencian que las cooperativas son agentes de desarrollo local, porque surgen en los espacios locales y son creadas por personas de la comunidad para lograr su bienestar; así como también, promueven que sus socios participen en los tres flujos empresariales y tienden a integrarse en redes. Se concluye que para que dichas organizaciones contribuyan realmente a fortalecer el desarrollo local, es necesario que participen de manera activa en los procesos de transformación de las localidades en las cuales están inmersas, a través de la realización de actividades en las que se aprovechen las potencialidades de su entorno y se genere progreso y bienestar social.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) "Across the world, a new landscape of social investment has been developing rapidly over the last 10-15 years, yet there has not been an academic study of the phenomenon to date. This paper aims to address this important gap in social entrepreneurship research with new empirical and theoretical work. Theoretically, the paper takes an interpretive approach drawing on institutional theory and other work on the sociology of markets to conceptualize social investment as a socially constructed space within which different investment logics and investor rationalities are currently in play. Using a Weberian analytic lens this paper identifies two ideal type investor rationalities ( zweckrational ; wertrational ) that drive different institutional forms of social investment but also suggests that a third - systemic - rationality can be discerned that combines aspects of both in practice. This analysis suggests a three-part typology of social investment organized according to investor rationality that, in turn, generates a Social Investment Matrix consisting of nine distinct models. Empirically, this paper presents - for the first time - an attempt to quantify the flows of capital within the inchoate social investment landscape. The paper concludes by setting out three possible future scenarios for social investment each representing the ultimate dominance of a singular investor rationality."

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “Researchers claim that social entrepreneurship represents a new phenomenon within the social sector. Their studies often distinguish social entrepreneurs according to their emphasis on tracking and measuring their performance. By applying sense making theory to three case studies of funding relationships within the social sector, this study finds that organizations within the social sector employ performance measurement not just as a means of accountability, but also as a tool for making sense of social entrepreneurship as an organizational identity. As such, the article refocuses scholarly attention on social entrepreneurship as a socially constructed phenomenon.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “As a result of the increasing adoption of private sector firms' values and concepts, non-profit organizations (NPOs) are becoming more and more aware of intangible assets' importance for achieving competitive advantages. Even though reputation can be considered an organization's central intangible asset, there is still no appropriate measurement approach for reputation in this context. In this paper, we identify the dimensions of NPO reputation and develop indices to measure these components. We develop a model by means of a qualitative inquiry and a quantitative study using a large-scale sample from the German general public. We find support for a two-dimensional measurement approach comprising an affective and cognitive component as well as four antecedent constructs ( quality, performance, organizational social responsibility (OSR), and attractiveness). The results of a second quantitative study in which we examine NPO reputation's relationship with important outcome variables, such as willingness to donate or work as an honorary member, provide support for the measurement approach's stability as well as criterion validity. Furthermore, the results reveal the affective dimension's importance regarding positively influencing donor behavior.”

Lien Link/ Enlace	Paid access to this article at: http://www.ssireview.org/articles/entry/measuring_social_value/
Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “Funders, nonprofit executives, and policy-makers are very enthusiastic about measuring social value. Alas, they cannot agree on what it is, let alone how to assess it. Their main obstacle is assuming that social value is objective, fixed, and stable. When people approach social value as subjective, malleable, and variable, they create better metrics to capture it. Over the last few decades, many people have attempted to measure what is sometimes called social, public, or civic value—that is, the value that nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), social enterprises, social ventures, and social programs create. The demand for these metrics has come from all sectors: Foundations want to direct their grants to the most effective programs; public officials, policymakers, and government budget offices have to account for their spending decisions; investors want hard data analogous to measures of profit; and nonprofits need to demonstrate their impact to funders, partners, and beneficiaries.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “Does board diversity or representativeness influence organizational performance? Though it is understudied in both the public and the nonprofit sectors, learning more about this critical subject can enhance organizational performance within highly collaborative settings. Community mediation centers, which rely on multiple public and private resources to meet their programmatic objectives, provide excellent case studies for analyzing the impact of different kinds of interorganizational linkages on organizational performance. A multitheoretic view incorporating agency, resource dependence, and stakeholder perspectives is employed through a national sample and a two-stage analysis using a logic model to test the cumulative impact of board characteristics and interorganizational relationships on organizational outcomes. Organizations' collaborative capacity depends on several kinds of boundary-spanning activities, including network ties, revenue sources, and the number of stakeholder groups represented on the board.”
Mots-clés Keywords/ Palabras clave	Evaluation, performance, board, stakeholder, nonprofit.

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “Current theorizations of bricolage in entrepreneurship studies require refinement and development to be used as a theoretical framework for social entrepreneurship. Our analysis traces bricolage's conceptual underpinnings from various disciplines, identifying its key constructs as making do, a refusal to be constrained by limitations, and improvisation. Although these characteristics appear to epitomize the process of creating social enterprises, our research identifies three further constructs associated with social entrepreneurship: social value creation, stakeholder participation, and persuasion. Using data from a qualitative study of eight U.K. social enterprises, we apply the bricolage concept to social entrepreneurial action and propose an extended theoretical framework of social bricolage.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “A complexity science-based model for social innovation in social enterprises is presented. The three components of the model include: (1) representing the evolution of social innovation using nonlinear dynamical systems with accompanying parameters and attractors; (2) a cusp catastrophe model of bifurcation or the emergence of a new attractor; (3) the role of emergence in complex systems utilizing recombinatory operations. The model represents the emergence of social innovation as an evolving dynamical system governed by the interaction of two parameters. The first parameter is opportunity tension or the degree of coordination and organization on a collective level required to resolve social problems or take advantage of social opportunities. The second is informational differences having to do with the accessibility of information via social networks connecting key players in the social system under consideration. The informational differences parameter also refers to experiments in social novelty acting as seeds of the emergent social innovations. Since social innovation is understood as the emergence of a new attractor reflecting the social innovations, the new attractor is shown to replace an ordinary attractor representing inadequate 'business as usual' practices and social networks that have not been able to resolve the social problem or take advantage of the opportunity. At a critical threshold, the social system undergoes bifurcation as extant social components are recombined leading to the generation of novel social forms that can more sufficiently resolve the social problem or take advantage of the opportunity.”

Mots-clés Keywords/ Palabras clave	Social innovation, science model, opportunity, information, social enterprise.

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “The concepts of social enterprise and social entrepreneurship are making amazing breakthroughs in EU countries and the United States. Until recently, the debates on both sides of the Atlantic have taken place in parallel trajectories with few connections among them. In the first part of the paper, we describe the European and US historical landscapes in which those concepts took root. In the second part, we analyse how the various conceptualizations have evolved. This analysis paves the way for the third part, in which we highlight the conceptual convergences and divergences among regions as well as within the US and European landscapes.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the article) “After having stated some definitions and specified the legal and tax status of nonprofit organizations in France and the USA, this paper begins by comparing the scope of the American and the French third sectors, their structure and resources, using data from the Johns Hopkins Comparative Nonprofit Sector Project. It explains the differences between the two sectors, which are considered to follow the Liberal Anglo-Saxon and European Welfare Partnership ideal-types found in “social origins” theory. Secondly, the paper highlights the evolution of the two sectors from 1995 to 2007. It stresses the reinforcement of the specific features of third sectors, and their path dependency, even if some trends are the same in both countries. Finally, the paper tries to identify the impact of the financial crisis, the economic recession and new social issues facing both third sectors.”

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(informaciones provenientes de la pagina web arriba citada) "La responsabilidad social empresarial (RSE) se ha convertido en un verdadero instrumento de gestión para las empresas. Su transversalidad, al afectar directa e indirectamente a todos los ámbitos de la organización, ha puesto de relevancia que estamos ante un auténtico modelo de gestión. El movimiento cooperativo, desde sus orígenes, es pionero en el ámbito de la responsabilidad social empresarial al fijar unos principios cooperativos que han soportado el paso del tiempo y, en la actualidad, siguen siendo fundamentales para fijar el marco ético y de responsabilidad social para las cooperativas. Las memorias de sostenibilidad, o las memorias de responsabilidad social, son uno de los principales instrumentos a través de los cuales las empresas comunican a sus grupos de interés (los stakeholders) los resultados de su triple desempeño: el económico-financiero, el social y el ambiental. Con esta guía queremos ofrecer a las cooperativas agroalimentarias una referencia para que les sea más fácil realizar sus memorias de responsabilidad social, favoreciendo el diálogo con sus grupos de referencia y el traslado al conjunto de la sociedad de los resultados de su modelo de gestión."

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(information issue de l'URL cité ci-haut) « Ce travail porte sur le suivi de l'emploi dans l'économie sociale, composée des associations, des fondations, des coopératives et des mutuelles. Il est le fruit d'une coopération qui date maintenant de cinq années, avec l'Agence centrale des organismes de sécurité sociale (ACOSSURSSAF), et avec la Caisse centrale de la mutualité sociale agricole (MSA). Une annexe méthodologique présente les définitions et les options retenues par notre équipe, en toute transparence. Elle présente aussi notre démarche conduite avec nos partenaires, de telle sorte que le lecteur peut, à tout moment, savoir comment sont obtenus les résultats publiés. Les données recueillies sont homogènes, qu'elles concernent le régime général ou le régime agricole. A partir du travail effectué selon la nouvelle nomenclature d'activité en vigueur depuis le 1er janvier 2008, la série annuelle a été reconstituée d'une manière également homogène, pour une observation rigoureuse de l'évolution. »

Il est le fruit d'une coopération qui date maintenant de cinq années, avec l'Agence centrale des organismes de sécurité sociale (ACOSSURSSAF), et avec la Caisse centrale de la mutualité sociale agricole (MSA). L'approche du périmètre de l'économie sociale, que nous partageons avec le Conseil national des Chambres régionales d'économie sociale (CNCRES) et avec le service public en charge du suivi de ce secteur1 avait été particulièrement délicate, pour l'année 2008, compte tenu du changement de nomenclature d'activité française, intervenue au 1er janvier 2008. La publication de juin 2009 s'en était fait l'écho. La préparation de cette publication a également été fort délicate, tant sont nombreux les mouvements intervenant au sein des coopératives et des mutuelles (restructurations, regroupements, changements de statuts juridiques). Nous sommes parvenus à les déceler par un suivi très précis des établissements actifs en 2008 et absents des bases en 2009, et inversement par un repérage des établissements apparaissant en 2009. »

Résumé Abstract/Resumen	(abstract excerpted from the document) "The program Building the Big Society was the first major policy announcement of the new coalition government on 18 May 2010. Since then, there has been much speculation as to what the Big Society actually means, as the increasing number of articles and blog-posts testifies. Building on David Kane's blog-post on the numbers behind the Big Society, the NCVO research team is keen to explore in greater depth the evidence behind this important policy agenda which emphasises the need to transform the relationship between citizens and the state. This document aims to bring together some of the key evidence sources on the Big Society, in order to inform the debate and contribute to current thinking about how the different dimensions of the agenda might be taken forward."
